

SUMMER CAMP PROCEDURES DUE TO COVID-19

As a response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Newport Art Museum has adopted new guidelines and formulated a plan designed to provide a safe, clean, and secure environment for our employees, instructors, and campers. Newport Art Museum summer camps will take place from July 6 - August 24 and will comply with Reopening RI Guidelines including:

- All staff, instructors, and volunteers will wear cloth face coverings at all times while on museum campus.
- Campers should wear face masks as tolerated.
- Summer camp groups at the museum will be no larger than 12 people, including staff and children. These groups will be stable groups, meaning the same individuals, including staff and children in the same group every day. In maintaining stable groups, this means groups may not be combined during drop-off or pick-up or for large group-recreation activities, such as time on the lawn.
- Drop off and pickup for summer camp will take place outdoors. Drop off and pick up times will be staggered, and families should wait in their car until waived over by museum staff.
- Parents or guardians will fill out a self assessment of their child's health each day to screen for symptoms.
- Campers will have their temperature taken via the forehead, and any camper with a temperature measuring over 100.4 degrees will be sent home.
- The camper who is sent home due to a temperature measuring over 100.4 degrees will be permitted back at summer camp if they maintain a temperature of 97 - 100.3 degrees for at least 72 hours, or can show a negative Covid-19 test, or a written note from a primary care doctor stating that they are not contagious.
- If a camper is sent home due to symptoms of Covid-19, they will be given a prorated refund for the days of camp they were unable to attend. Other campers in their group will be eligible for this refund should they feel it is medically necessary.
